Available online at www.sciencedirect.com

SCIENCE DIRECT®

ELSEVIER

Research Strategies 19 (2003) 247–249

Research Strategies

Index for Volume 19

TITLE INDEX

A

A library instruction case study: measuring success from multiple perspectives. Janet Webster and Loretta Rielly, 1:16.

A model for strategic business instruction. Signe Boudreau and Tracy Bicknell-Holmes, 2:148.

Acquisition of computer skills by older users: A mixed methods study. Susan Shoemaker, 3–4:165.

Anticipating library use by business students: the uses of a syllabus study. Nancy H. Dewald, 1:33.

C

Collaboration: a value and a method. Lisa Janicke Hinchliffe, 1:1.

H

Having your say in a scholarly way. Lisa Janicke Hinchliffe, 3–4:163.

I

In-house training for instruction librarians. Sheril J. Hook, Marianne Stowell Bracke, Louise Greenfield, and Victoria A. Mills, 2:99.

Integrating information literacy and its assessment into a graduate business course: A collaborative framework. Martha Cooney and Lorene Hiris, 3–4:213.

M

Measuring international students' understanding of concepts related to the use of library-based technology. Philip C. Howze and Dorothy M. Moore, 1:57.

N

Nontraditional undergraduates at home, work, and school: an examination of information-seeking behaviors and the impact of information literacy instruction. Jennifer L. Branch, 1:3.

P

Personalized instruction and assistance services for distance learners: Cultivating a research relationship. Linda L. Lillard, 3–4:204.

R

Research exercises: A sequenced approach to just-in-time information literacy instruction. Henry M. Walker and Kevin R. Engel, 2:135.

S

Student perceptions (and the reality) of percentage of journal articles found through full-text databases. Robert A. Bartsch and Bridgette L. Tydlacka, 2:128.

0734-3310/$ - see front matter © 2005 Elsevier Inc. All rights reserved.
doi:10.1016/S0734-3310(05)00021-2

T

Technology and the constructivist learning environment: Implications for teaching information literacy skills. Beth S. Woodard, 3–4:181.

The course portfolio in a library setting. Margaret Fast and Jeanne Armstrong, 1:46.

The EDUCAUSE conference: Higher education and information technologies. Terry Taylor, 3–4:244.

The emergence of learning objects: The reference librarian's role. John D. Shank, 3–4:193.

The gift of a research agenda. Lisa Janicke Hinchliffe, 2:75.

The learning environment: First-year students, teaching assistants, and information literacy. Sue Samson and Michelle S. Millet, 2:84.

The origin of library instruction in the United States, 1820–1900. Stephen C. Weiss, 3–4:233.

AUTHOR INDEX

A

Armstrong, Jeanne. See Margaret Fast, 1:46.

B

Bartsch, Robert A. and Bridgette L. Tydlacka. Student perceptions (and the reality) of percentage of journal articles found through full-text databases, 2:128.

Bicknell-Holmes, Tracy. See Signe Boudreau, 2:148.

Boudreau, Signe and Tracy Bicknell-Holmes. A model for strategic business instruction, 2:148.

Bracke, Marianne Stowell. See Sheril J. Hook, 2:99.

Branch, Jennifer L. Nontraditional undergraduates at home, work, and school: an examination of information-seeking behaviors and the impact of information literacy instruction, 1:3.

C

Cooney, Martha and Lorene Hiris. Integrating information literacy and its assessment into a graduate business course: A collaborative framework, 3–4:213.

D

Dewald, Nancy H. Anticipating library use by business students: the uses of a syllabus study, 1:33.

E

Engel, Kevin R. See Henry M. Walker, 2:135.

F

Fast, Margaret and Jeanne Armstrong. The course portfolio in a library setting, 1:46.

G

Greenfield, Louise. See Sheril J. Hook, 2:99.

H

Hinchliffe, Lisa Janicke. Collaboration: a value and a method, 1:1.

Hinchliffe, Lisa Janicke. Having your say in a scholarly way, 3–4:163.

Hinchliffe, Lisa Janicke. The gift of a research agenda, 2:75.

Hiris, Lorene. See Martha Cooney, 3–4: 213.

Hook, Sheril J., Marianne Stowell Bracke, Louise Greenfield, and Victoria A. Mills. In-house training for instruction librarians, 2:99.

Howze, Philip C. and Dorothy M. Moore. Measuring international students' understanding of concepts related to the use of library-based technology, 1:57.

L

Lillard, Linda L. Personalized instruction and assistance services for distance learners: Cultivating a research relationship, 3–4:204.

M

Millet, Michelle S. See Sue Samson, 2:84.

Mills, Victoria A. See Sheril J. Hook, 2:99.

Moore, Dorothy M. See Philip C. Howze, 1:57.

R

Rielly, Loretta. See Janet Webster, 1:16.

S

Samson, Sue and Michelle S. Millet. The learning environment: First-year students, teaching assistants, and information literacy, 2:84.

Shank, John D. The emergence of learning objects: The reference librarian's role, 3–4:193.

Shoemaker, Susan. Acquisition of computer skills by older users: A mixed methods study, 3–4:165.

T

Taylor, Terry. The EDUCAUSE conference: Higher education and information technologies, 3–4:244.

Tydlacka, Bridgette L. See Robert A. Bartsch, 2:128.

W

Walker, Henry M. and Kevin R. Engel. Research exercises: A sequenced approach to just-in-time information literacy instruction, 2:135.

Webster, Janet and Loretta Rielly. A library instruction case study: measuring success from multiple perspectives, 1:16.

Weiss, Stephen C. The origin of library instruction in the United States, 1820–1900, 3–4:233.

Woodard, Beth S. Technology and the constructivist learning environment: Implications for teaching information literacy skills, 3–4:181.